The Federal Law Enforcement Training Center (FLETC) is the nation's lead organization for interagency training of Federal law enforcement personnel. The FLETC trains the majority of all Federal officers and agents. FLETC services 70 Federal agencies; provides training to State, local and international police in selected advanced programs; graduates approximately 23,000 students annually; and is the largest law enforcement training establishment in the country. Headquartered on a 1500-acre campus at Glynco, near Brunswick, Georgia, the FLETC also operates a satellite training center in Artesia, New Mexico.

SECURITY SPECIALTIES

The Security Specialties instructors teach courses in officer safety and survival, bombs and explosives, physical security, anti-terrorism and a variety of other security related topics. Firearms training involves instruction in the use of revolvers, semi-automatic pistols, and shoulder weapons using the "Transtar" target system. This unique

The FLETC is a Partnership of Federal law enforcement organizations. Our mission is to provide quality, cost-effective training for law enforcement professionals. We accomplish our mission by utilizing law enforcement and training experts; providing quality facilities, support services, and technical assistance; conducting law enforcement research and development; and sharing law enforcement technology. The programs taught at the FLETC provide students with a combination of classroom instruction and "hands-on" practical exercises. These exercises often involve contract role players who act as victims, witnesses, and suspects. The students apply their classroom knowledge in these exercises which simulate typical situations encountered on the job.

The FLETC Corporate Values: To accomplish our mission and become the world leader in law enforcement training, we must: place the good of the organization above personal interests through a spirit of teamwork, promote dedication to quality service, require open and honest communications, commit to personal and organizational integrity, empower employees by encouraging risk-taking and innovation, respect and value diversity and individuality, ensure fair and consistent treatment and equal opportunity, create opportunities for job satisfaction and career development, recognize and reward individual and team accomplishments.

The FLETC hires instructors to teach a variety of courses and specialty areas. This listing provides a general idea of the types of material taught.

The Marine Training Branch provides specialized training programs relating to marine law enforcement operations. Topics include: navigation, rules of the road, mechanical troubleshooting, pursuit, intercept, board and search, boating accident investigation, safety and survival, and others. Realistic training is provided through hands-on training on navigable waterways and open ocean.

The Driver Training Branch programs provide basic and advanced classes in vehicle dynamics involving highway response, skid control, non-emergency vehicle operations, and vehicle ambush counter measures techniques.

ENFORCEMENT OPERATIONS

Instructors teach various operational procedures specific to student's job as investigators or uniformed police officers. Students receive instruction in techniques such as working with informants, conducting a surveillance, executing search warrants, working under-cover, radio communication, note taking, report writing, and other operational patrol skills. Advanced programs include the Introduction to Criminal Investigations Training Program.

ENFORCEMENT TECHNIQUES

In basic training, students learn & apply techniques which have forensic science application. They are instructed on drugs of abuse, fingerprinting, crime lab, and photography. Advanced program offerings include: Advanced Photography, Technical Investigative Equipment, National Wildfire Investigations, and Advanced Video.

LEGAL: The FLETC's Legal Division conducts mock trials which help teach students proper courtroom demeanor and conduct and how to cope with cross examination.

FINANCIAL FRAUD INSTITUTE

The Financial Fraud Institute (FFI) prepares criminal investigators to deal effectively with computer-based crimes as well as the complex arena of white collar crimes.
